Rebecca Severin is the Program Manager for Healthy Families Seven Rivers, below is a synopsis of the program:

Child abuse is a concept that is not easily defined in “black and white” terms. In Chapter 39 of the Florida Statute there are specific criteria listed that determine what is considered child abuse and neglect (CAN), but as professionals and adults that come into contact with families on a regular basis we understand that CAN has a lot of gray areas. I call these gray area, precursors. These precursors are those dynamics in the home that create an environment conducive of child abuse and neglect. They are things such as belittling, name calling, intimidation, terrorizing, threats, etc. They are all of the actions that lead to emotional abuse well before there is ever a hit, a mark, a bruise, a shake or a child’s death. The Department of Children and Families’ Child Protection Division works hard every day to investigate and intervene on the behalf of children, but they are not allowed into a home until an abuse report is generated from allegations that are measured up to the very black and white, Chapter 39.

The thing that sets Healthy Families a part, is that we work in the gray area. We are not constricted by the rigidity of Chapter 39 and are goal is prevention. The curriculum that we use, Growing Great Kids, is founded on educating parents on those precursors. How to identify them in their own childhood, how to identify the feelings they felt and relate that to their children’s feelings and then teach them techniques on how to change their behavior to better their family. Healthy Families shows parents that there is a way to build the child that they want by promoting their protective factors (Parental Resilience, Social Connections, Concrete Supports, Knowledge of Parenting and Child Development and Social/Emotional Competence of Children), demonstrating and modeling positive parent- child interactions and educating them on the 6 Daily Do’s to build the child they want (Empathetic Parenting (e-parenting), Character Builders, 4 Steps to Success, Body Builders ad Play-by-Play).

Healthy Families Seven Rivers (HFSR) serves Hamilton, Jefferson, Lafayette, Madison and Taylor counties. We target women prenatally, but serve families with newborns up to 3 months of age. At initial contact with families, a voluntary assessment is conducted to determine the need for services. If the assessment determines that the family is eligible for home visiting services and the family volunteers to participate, a trained parent educator is assigned to the family to provide services. The family is served initially on an intensive, weekly basis until risk factors are addressed, and in most cases resolved, then the family is moved to less intensive services on a gradual basis. HFSR can stay engaged in the home until the child is 5 years old.
